

The book was found

At The Existentialist Caf : Freedom, Being, And Apricot Cocktails With Jean-Paul Sartre, Simone De Beauvoir, Albert Camus, Martin Heidegger, Maurice Merleau-Ponty And Others

Synopsis

From the best-selling author of How to Live, a spirited account of one of the twentieth century's major intellectual movements and the revolutionary thinkers who came to shape it. Paris, 1933: three contemporaries meet over apricot cocktails at the Bec-de-Gaz bar on the rue Montparnasse. They are the young Jean-Paul Sartre, Simone de Beauvoir, and longtime friend Raymond Aron, a fellow philosopher who raves to them about a new conceptual framework from Berlin called Phenomenology. "You see," he says, "if you are a phenomenologist you can talk about this cocktail and make philosophy out of it!" It was this simple phrase that would ignite a movement, inspiring Sartre to integrate Phenomenology into his own French, humanistic sensibility, thereby creating an entirely new philosophical approach inspired by themes of radical freedom, authentic being, and political activism. This movement would sweep through the jazz clubs and cafés of the Left Bank before making its way across the world as Existentialism. Featuring not only philosophers, but also playwrights, anthropologists, convicts, and revolutionaries, At the Existentialist Café follows the existentialists' story, from the first rebellious spark through the Second World War, to its role in postwar liberation movements such as anticolonialism, feminism, and gay rights. Interweaving biography and philosophy, it is the epic account of passionate encounters—fights, love affairs, mentorships, rebellions, and long partnerships—and a vital investigation into what the existentialists have to offer us today, at a moment when we are once again confronting the major questions of freedom, global responsibility, and human authenticity in a fractious and technology-driven world.

Book Information

Hardcover: 448 pages

Publisher: Other Press (March 1, 2016)

Language: English

ISBN-10: 1590514882

ISBN-13: 978-1590514887

Product Dimensions: 6.3 x 1.3 x 9.3 inches

Shipping Weight: 1.6 pounds (View shipping rates and policies)

Average Customer Review: 4.6 out of 5 stars See all reviews (143 customer reviews)

Best Sellers Rank: #6,977 in Books (See Top 100 in Books) #3 in Books > Biographies & Memoirs > Professionals & Academics > Philosophers #4 in Books > Politics & Social Sciences > Philosophy > Movements > Existentialism #55 in Books > Biographies & Memoirs > Arts &

Customer Reviews

In the opening scene of At the Existentialist Caf , philosopher Raymond Aron says to his friend Jean-Paul Sartre, "If you are a phenomenologist you can talk about this cocktail and make philosophy out of it." After reading this book, I say, "If you are Sarah Bakewell, you can take existentialism and make sense out of it." The existentialist themes of freedom, political activism, and "authentic being" became watchwords of the middle and late 20th century. When I first encountered existentialist writing, I was simultaneously entranced, repelled, and confused. (Bakewell tells us that even Beauvoir said that when she and Sartre tried to read Heidegger's lecture "What is Metaphysics?", "we could not understand a word of it.") Not only did the existentialists not always agree with each other, sometimes they did not even agree with themselves. National Book Critics' Circle Award winner Bakewell's clear writing and carefully researched portrayal of the context in which existentialism developed gave me a much better understanding of this school of thought that both influenced and reflected most of the last century. In addition to providing a lucid discussion of the various expressions of existentialist philosophy, Bakewell really brings to life the thinkers behind it. Names like Husserl, Heidegger, Beauvoir and lesser known figures in their milieu became real people. One of my favorite chapters introduced me to "the dancing philosopher" Merleau-Ponty, whose personality was as engaging as his thinking. Unlike Beauvoir and Sartre, "journalists did not quiz him about his sex life---which is a shame, as they would have dug up some interesting stories." Photos throughout the book were a nice complement to the narrative.

It is well known that technology has reached the point where we are often better known by the almighty computer than we know ourselves. Although my Vine queue sometimes mystifies me (WHY as a 76-year-old woman whose youngest grandchild is in high school am I continuously being offered baby products?), it turns out that Sarah Bakewell's "At the Existentialist Caf " is a tremendous gift to my reading experience. It didn't take me long to realize why I was offered this book, despite my previous total lack of involvement with any formal study of philosophy. I recently purchased several books relating to Edith Stein, the Jewish existential philosopher and student of Husserl, who converted to Catholicism; became a nun; was martyred at Auschwitz; and recently canonized. Indeed, Bakewell's book, much to my delight, more or less begins with a discussion of the phenomenological approach to philosophy of Husserl, and cites Stein's dissertation on Empathy, which is one of the books I purchased. In any event, Bakewell's book is a magnificently crafted narrative that really defies any narrow classification. Yes, it deals with modern philosophical trends such as Phenomenology, Existentialism and Transcendentalism going all the way back to Kierkegaard and Nietzsche. In addition, it is a historical description of the circumstances surrounding the development of philosophy and its interaction with the political scene before, during and after the rise of Nazism and WWII. Furthermore, it is a series of wonderfully insightful biographical vignettes of the major authors of that era, with special focus on Sartre and Beauvoir. A book with this scope could turn out to be deadly dull, incredibly complex, or hopelessly academic. It is none of these things.

Sarah Bakewell's At the Existentialist Caf  is, like its title, entertaining and glib. It consists largely of anecdotes about and shallow intellectual histories of its major figures. Her heroes are Beauvoir, Sartre, and Merleau-Ponty, roughly in that order. Her summaries of the various philosophical positions rarely dig any deeper than the familiar commonplaces of each of them: Husserl's epoch, Sartre's existence precedes essence, Heidegger's investigations into Dasein and Being-in-the-World, for example. This is in no way a probing book. It could prove useful as a way of stimulating more insightful or complex readings in the original writings of each of them, but its own summaries remain doggedly superficial. Its bias is clearly toward Beauvoir and Sartre. Some of the consequences of that bias are troubling. She rightly excoriates Heidegger for not only his Nazi affiliations, but for the even more important Nazi-like implications in much of his thought, though there are far better and more probing studies of this problem in Heidegger's work, like Charles Bambach's Heidegger's Roots. But, though she rightly denounces Sartre for his support of some "odious" regimes, she nearly forgives him for that since his support was motivated by a wish for human freedom. The philosophical entanglement Sartre found himself in while promoting both freedom and engagement is one Bakewell discusses, but once again the treatment remains superficial and little detail is offered. A man who talked a lot about freedom and yet supported Stalin, Mao, and even Pol Pot shouldn't be forgiven for his sins quite so easily. About the famous disagreements between and falling out of Camus and Sartre she says too little. Camus, it seems to me, she discusses shabbily.

Download to continue reading...

At the Existentialist Caf : Freedom, Being, and Apricot Cocktails with Jean-Paul Sartre, Simone de Beauvoir, Albert Camus, Martin Heidegger, Maurice Merleau-Ponty and Others
At the Existentialist Caf : Freedom, Being, and Apricot Cocktails
Flesh of Images, The:

Merleau-Ponty between Painting and Cinema (SUNY series in Contemporary Continental Philosophy) Jean-Paul HÃ©bert Was There/Jean-Paul HÃ©bert Etait LÃ© (English and French Edition) Looking for The Stranger: Albert Camus and the Life of a Literary Classic Southern Country Cooking from the Loveless Cafe: Fried Chicken, Hams, and Jams from Nashville's Favorite Cafe Heidegger's Analytic: Interpretation, Discourse and Authenticity in Being and Time (Modern European Philosophy) Cooking with Cafe Pasqual's: Recipes from Santa Fe's Renowned Corner Cafe Coyote Cafe: Foods from the Great Southwest, Recipes from Coyote Cafe Heidegger: The Question of Being and History (The Seminars of Jacques Derrida) Fast Favorites Under Pressure: 4-Quart Pressure Cooker recipes and tips for fast and easy meals by Blue Jean Chef, Meredith Laurence (The Blue Jean Chef) Air Fry Everything: Foolproof Recipes for Fried Favorites and Easy Fresh Ideas by Blue Jean Chef, Meredith Laurence (The Blue Jean Chef) The Mysticism of Paul the Apostle (The Albert Schweitzer Library) Heidegger: His Life and His Philosophy (Insurrections: Critical Studies in Religion, Politics, and Culture) I Put A Spell On You: The Autobiography Of Nina Simone Simone Biles: Superstar of Gymnastics: GymnStars Volume 6 The Bloomsbury Companion to Heidegger (Bloomsbury Companions) The Soulful Divas: Personal Portraits of over a dozen divine divas from Nina Simone, Aretha Franklin, & Diana Ross, to Patti LaBelle, Whitney Houston, & Janet Jackson Very Best of Nina Simone (Piano/Vocal/Guitar Songbook) Jean Haines' Atmospheric Watercolours: Painting with Freedom, Expression and Style

Dmca